CANCERS

BRAIN TUMOR

"Brain cancers kill nearly 14,000 Americans annually and can be particularly difficult to treat. Our scientists are working to pioneer new approaches and shift the standard of care beyond surgery, chemotherapy, and radiation." – Fred Hutch

APPROVED TREATMENTS:

APPROVED SURGERY:

Vesicle Sanitization with UV-C

Brain tumors start somewhere in the sinus cavities. The United States Military no longer approves brain tumor removal via removal of portions of the skull for medical practice. Brain tumors that were not caused by penetration of the skull will not be treated by penetration of the skull. Non-invasive treatment with an endoscope locates the gape of a virus vesicle in the sinus cavity. The gape will exist in the optic foramen and travel through the optic canal into the brain. The tumor is sanitized and removed through the existing gape by UV-C light delivered by low-frequency fiber optic cable. The surgery requires preparation of the mouth, throat, and breathing passageways with CARMEX. The surgery involves suturing of the gape after the tumor is cleared out for post-treatment. The surgery involves minimal blood loss during the stitching of the nasal cavity gape.

BREAST CANCER

“Our researchers are exploring every aspect of various types of breast cancer. Our science ranges from studies of risk factors such as inherited genetic mutations to the development of innovative treatments such as immunotherapies.” – Fred Hutch

APPROVED SURGERY:

Vesicle Sanitization with UV-C

Breast tumors begin when a virus transfers from mother to infant through the mother's birth canal into the infant's throat, then from infant to mother from the mouth of the infant into the breast during breastfeeding. The process of removing a pycnogonida from a breast does involve some tearing and can require suturing and post-care. Heat breast tissue to increase the flexibility of breast tissue. Begin the breast milk expression until a large leg protrudes from the nipple. Flicking the breast tissue on the right side of the pycnogonids can scare it out. When over half of the pycnogonid has exited breast tissue, UV-C is powered on into the breast tissue, causing the virus to exit the breast through the nipple area rapidly. UV-C remains on breast tissue while Niacin is applied directly into torn breast tissue for 3 hours. The breast is sutured, and the patient is sent home and scheduled for post-treatment.

CERVICAL CANCER

“Researchers at Fred Hutch played an integral role in identifying the link between human papillomavirus (HPV) and cervical cancer, as well as the development of lifesaving HPV vaccines. Haemonetics Corporation (Blue) filters hold for two rounds of Apheresis using UV-C light.

APPROVED SURGERY:

Patients who live with sepsis have dangerously low pH levels. pH is the measure of electrons within a substance. Low pH equates to a lack of electrons. Bones and tissue are not made from elements alone. Bones require electrons to form bonds between calcium molecules. Phage and plasmodium parasites leach electrons from their host to digest into radioactive tritium. Without electrons, the body will continue to digest proteins and deliver them to growth sites, but no physical structures will form. Increasing pH in cancer patients is the only method to ensure strong bone and tissue growth is possible.

MYELOYDYSPLASTIC SYNDROME

"Myelodysplastic syndrome encompasses several diseases in which the bone marrow functions abnormally, leading blood cells to die prematurely. About one-third of people with MDS will develop acute myeloid leukemia. ### APPROVED SURGERY:

Magnesium is the limiting reagent in the crystallization and spread of melanin evenly throughout the epidermal layer. Skin spots exist only in humans who are Magnesium deficient. Melanin releases electrons via the photoelectric effect when struck by photons from the sun. Magnesium deficiency reduces energy in the human body. The body's lack of electrons from sunlight leads to low pH levels, sepsis, and cancer. A Magnesium-deficient patient may lay out in the sun for days attempting to “get a tan”. At the same time, their melanin intake spots grow larger and blister without Magnesium as a reagent for a solid compositional layer of melanin to form within the epidermis.

Magnesium deficiency is a sign of human captivity, torture, and blood loss. Magnesium deficiency at birth is only found in humans with a genetic heritage involving some captivity or trauma. People living with Magnesium deficiency often experience mental health symptoms that are frequently misdiagnosed as bipolar, schizophrenia, depression, etc. Usually, the mental anxieties of families with a history of physical trauma are the cause of these cognitive symptoms. Trauma is included in this document to provide doctors with indicators of trauma during treatment. Mult-generational Magnesium deficiency is passed through multiple generations until two parents eliminate their Magnesium deficiency before and during pregnancy.
